The Rebirth of the AXIS/I Navigator Timepiece after 24 Years

A few years after founding Angular Momentum in 1998, I worked on the design of the AXIS/I Navigator watch.

By the end of 1999 the work was completed and production began in the spring of 2002 and the first deliveries started mid 2002 and by end of 2004 all 1000 pieces were sold .

Since then, I have received many inquiries about the AXIS/I and I also receive a steady stream of AXIS/I watches back for servicing, which suggests that many of the watches are still being worn today.

After inspection of the toolings I assume it will be possible to manufacture another batch of 100 pieces of this model for the 25th anniversary, in exactly the same design as 20 years ago and at the same price of USD 1,480.-

AXIS/I Navigator Watch

42 mm stainless steel case with down-turned lugs, satin finished sides and a very thin mirror polished bezel, Single curved sapphire crystal. Black lacquer dial with polished applied numbers for the minutes and luminous hour markers.

The hour hand is a combination of a revolving hour disk (Patent 686988) and a regular hour hand. The disk shows the hours at 12 o'clock and could be used as a second time zone. Polished Minute hand with lume and a polished sweep-second. Screwed-on stainless steel crown with black logo inlay. Transparent back showing the self-winding movement. Black leather strap

ANGULAR MOMENTUM
AXIS

One of my favorite pastimes is to surf the Internet looking for new and innovative watches that have yet to break onto the scene. During one of these searches, I stumbled upon an up-and-coming brand called Angular Momentum. Founded in 1999, this revolutionary company has managed to reinvent the wheel, so to speak, although not necessarily easier—way to tell purists will likely to the 999 members. To make things even more interesting, membership is transferable, so it is perfect as a gift or if a customer decides to sell the watch.

Where's the Bezel?

This has got to be the largest looking watch I have ever worn. It is not the largest by far, but it sure appears to be. The case measures a generous 42mm in diameter and 15mm thick, but the almost non-existent bezel makes this watch appear minuscule, almost a meager 1.5mm wide, which makes You must see this one in per-
